Applications are sought for Ad Astra Fellows within the UCD College of Business.

The College of Business at UCD is a dynamic, research-intensive, business school located in the vibrant European capital of Dublin. With a history reaching back over a century, the College has educated business leaders who have impacted greatly on the economic development of Ireland and beyond. The College has over 103,000 alumni globally.

Consistently ranked amongst the leading business schools in the world, the College of Business is currently ranked 22nd in the Financial Times European Business Schools rankings. It is the only Irish member of the Global Alliance in Management Education (CEMS) and the Global Network for Advanced Management (GNAM), and the College also holds the triple crown of accreditation from AACSB (US), EQUIS (Europe) and AMBA (UK).

We have recently completed a strategic planning process which sets out an exciting and ambitious agenda for the College in years ahead across research and innovation, teaching and learning, and meaningful societal engagement. In support of the University and College's strategic ambitions, we are now looking to recruit energetic, team-spirited, faculty colleagues who will have real impact across each of these dimensions.

The College is comprised of four constituent parts, the Lochlann Quinn School of Business ('the Quinn School'), the Michael Smurfit Graduate Business School ('the Smurfit School'), UCD Business – Global Campus, and Smurfit Executive Development ('Executive Development').
